Omaha A Contender For 2000 Transplant Games

by Colleen Sergeant
Medical Writer

The University of Nebraska Medical Center (UNMC) and the Nebraska Health System (NHS) are anxious to hear if the National Kidney Association selected Omaha to host the 2000 US Transplant Games.

Not only would Omaha welcome participants and visitors from all over the country, but UNO's facilities would host the competitions as well.

"This would offer national media exposure for UNO," said Michael Kult, assistant director of campus recreation. "We would be able to showcase UNO's athletic and educational facilities and Omaha at the same time."

An inadequate plan and a late start kept the Games away from Omaha in 1998, but this time around UNMC and NHS have taken a much more aggressive approach. If Omaha wins, NHS and UNMC will be the official sponsors. Kult believes Omaha, one of nine cities competing, has a good chance.

The games, founded in 1990, are held every two years. The Olympic-style competition attracted 1,500 participants and 4,000 spectators to the 1998 games at the Ohio State University in Columbus, Ohio this summer.

A group of planners from Omaha accompanied Team Nebraska to Columbus to see what it really takes to host the event. Members of the committee from UNO include Kult and Mike Milone, manager of food services.

Omaha would be expected to meet the food, lodging and transportation needs of close to 2,000 participants and 5,000 visitors. To meet these accommodations, Creighton University would offer its dormitory system, which includes new and newly renovated facilities. The KVNO radio personality and voice of BRUNO (Better Registration at UNO) Dale Munson announced his retirement. However, last week Munson announced he would not retire as planned. "I saw the honey-do list my wife had, and said, 'No way. I've got to keep working,'" he said.

UNO To Offer New Scholarship

by Beth Aken
Staff Writer

With Omaha growing and the need to keep Nebraskan's in Nebraska, Carl and Joyce Mammel have made a gift commitment of $1.5 million to the NU Foundation College of Business Administration Student and Faculty Excellence Fund.

This fund will allow UNO's Business College to award two-$4,000 scholarships and four-$1,000 scholarships a year to incoming freshman. William Swanson, assistant dean of the College of Business Administration said, "The criteria to be considered for this scholarship would be a students grade point average and leadership activities." There are three members on this committee to award out these scholarships.

Stanley Hille, dean of the College of Business Administration, mentions that, "The purpose of this scholarship is to attract and keep the best of Omaha students here in

Senate Comes To Order

by Craig Perkins
News Editor

Four new people, one new computer and one new committee brought the UNO Student Senate to its first meeting of the semester.

The new members are Tom Kielty for Continuing Studies, Christine Mixan for Student Publications, Karen Wordekemper for Fine Arts and Kathryn McWilliams will be a new court justice.

Treasurer Erwin discussed the new computer room that will be opening in the Milo Ball

Student Center this fall. Erwin said he expects the room to be "very popular...filled up most of the day."

Erwin introduced another idea to have a courtesy phone in the student government office for use by students.

Student President/Regent Joey Sanchez introduced an idea to use money from student fees to reward athletes as well as other students who excel in certain areas. He mentioned the volleyball team having to sell raffle tickets to pay for their championship rings as one of the inspirations for this idea.

Senator Kathy Denker seemed to voice the majority opinion when she talked of "treating all students fairly whether they excel in athletics or they excel in academics."

Senator Jeanne Howe emphasized the importance of scholarships over rings or awards.

Sanchez withdrew the idea.

Sanchez also talked about the Athletic Programming Committee, formed in order to boost student attendance at sports events. He mentioned the need for "more attendance at sports and SOLD events."

Sanchez also talked about the upcoming election saying that he would "love to see the next Student President/Regent come out of this room."

A resolution to assist with the expenses of a new ticket printer was passed. The software and printer will be used to create tickets for student events and the cost will be shared by Student Programming

A resolution to create a Campus Relations Committee was also passed. This committee will work with the Legislative and Public Relations Agency.

Munson Recalls Retirement Plans

by Eileen Kenney
Staff Writer

He's ba-ack. Or, more to the point, not leaving after all.

Before listeners even had a chance to miss him, Dale Munson, KVNO morning radio personality, decided retirement is not for him.

"I saw the honey-do list my wife had, and said, 'No way. I've got to keep working,'" Munson said Friday.

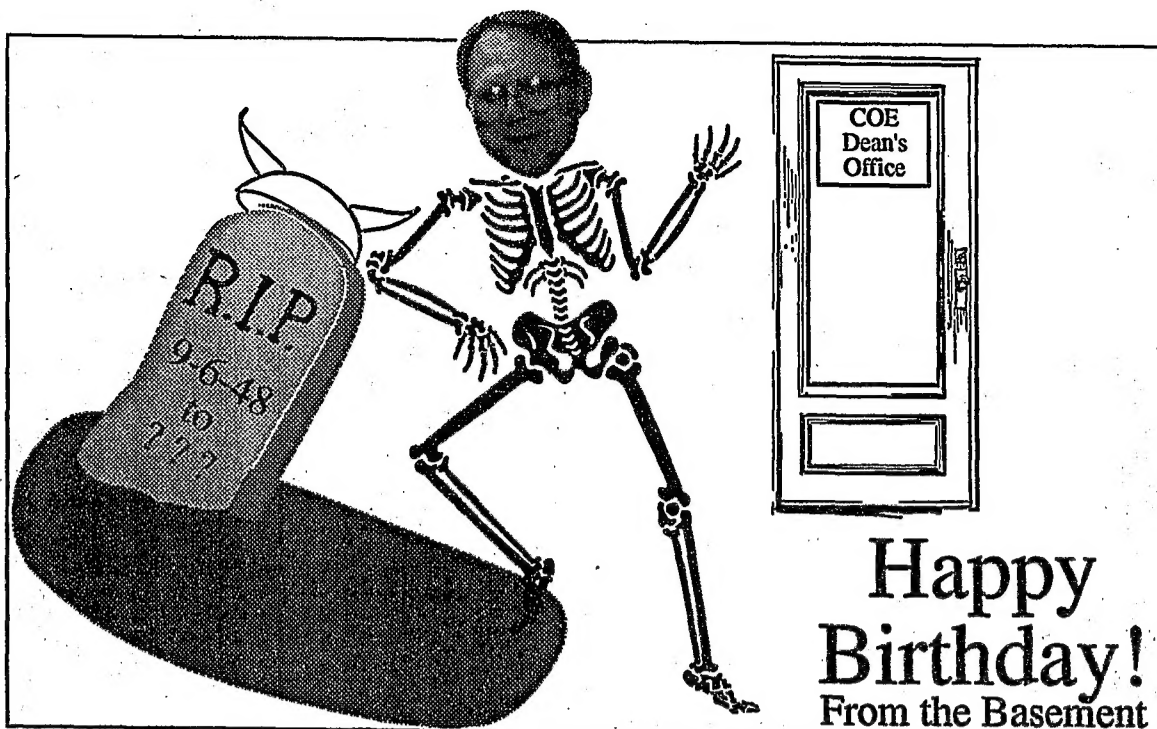

Monday, August 31, was to have been his last broadcast, and a farewell reception had been planned for that afternoon. But shortly after returning from vacation earlier in the month, Munson said he had some second thoughts.

"I had gotten a lot of very nice cards and letters," he said. "And you don't know how much you are appreciated until some of those things roll in. I made the decision (to stay) and KVNO had not made a commitment to any replacement yet, so they said I could stick around for another year."

KVNO was ready to move ahead with finding a replacement and had started the search process earlier this year when Munson first expressed his intention to retire, said Bill Jenks, KVNO program director. But Jenks agreed Munson's dulcet tones would be hard to replace. KVNO is very happy to have him stay, he said.

Munson said the A&E program "Biography" had something to do with his decision to stay.

"Early last week my wife and I watched a piece on Mike Wallace, the '60 Minutes' reporter, who had just signed a new contract with CBS. I figure, if he can keep going at 80, I can certainly do it at 67. So I'm going to give it one more year."

The DaleyDose

Right now, I am wearing a Smith Building Maintenance shirt, un-tucked, and a pair of khaki men's Polo pants that are two sizes too big. I admit I don't look that grand, but I'm comfortable.

I just feel so self-conscious when I have makeup on, or my shirt tucked in with a belt. I feel like I just stepped off the 1983 bus; that I should have big bangs to go with my fitted jeans, and maybe an acid washed jean jacket with buttons. Isn't 1998 the year where grunge was in?

I really don't get what is up with these women on campus nowadays. How long did it take them to get like that?

I wonder how they look in the morning before the layers of spackle and hours of fake baking. Do they really feel comfortable walking around half naked? Do they think anyone is going to think of them as more than just a pretty body?

A little bit of my harshness does come from jealousy. I could never pull off looking like that, no matter how hard I tried. And even if I did, I just wouldn't feel right.

That's what it amounts to: feeling right. If you feel right dressing in little shirts and shorts, that is okay. I don't want to be judged on how I dress, so it's only natural that I don't judge.

If I'm in college, I should start acting that way. If I want to dress and act the way I do, I'll just have to live, alone, with the consequences.

I never realized what a hypocrite I am.

I have been a bit side tracked lately.

In just three hours, I'll be leaving for Chicago. I'm so excited.

Today is my 22nd birthday and this trip is a present from my folks. I'll be staying with my older sister, and Friday night, I'll be going "clubbing" downtown with her and some of her college friends. I hope the single life in Chicago is better than it is here.

I really hate being single in Omaha, but it beats the alternative. I have always been a very independent woman. For some reason, I find it hard to be in a relationship. I just can't seem to justify to myself a reason why I should compromise. It's either my way or the highway. I feel like I only live once, so I might as well be doing what I want to do.

My mother assures me, on that one night a month when I sit at home bawling, eating Rocky Road ice cream straight from the carton, that if I would just dress up a bit, maybe comb my hair and shower before class, that I will find a man out there made just for me.

She tells me how these things "just take time." Maybe he took a wrong turn and is just a little late in getting here.

I think he took a wrong turn and got hit by a bus.

My mother isn't the only one who thinks I dress inappropriately. My friends share the same feeling, as well as my boss.

"UNO's finest...Here to protect and serve."

Organizations Fair Shows Campus Opportunities To UNO Students

by Ryan Gillen
Staff Writer

Rain showers Wednesday and early Thursday forced the annual student organizations fair inside the Milo Bail Student Center last Thursday.

"We were worried about attendance," Greek Advisor, Barb Treadway said, "but the turnout was great."

While UNO radio KBUL's dunk tank sat outside, about 50 groups and clubs set up information booths in the Aksarben Ballroom, in the Student Center's upper level.

Before the fair, Matt Rech, vice president of Sigma Phi Epsilon fraternity said the new location and loss of visibility would possibly hurt the fair's attendance.

"Typically, most anyone coming to a table is going to be a little shy," Rech said, "and being in an enclosed area hurts."

Despite the relocation, organizations still used the annual fair held during UNO's Welcome Back Week to increase student awareness of opportunities to get involved on campus.

Student Organizations Advisor Darrell Peterson organized the fair.

"It's an opportunity for new students like freshmen and transfer students to see what UNO has to offer," Peterson said. "It's also an opportunity for groups to promote themselves and recruit new members."

DeAnn Hanisch, chief administrative officer for Student Government, said her office needs to appoint a Chief Justice for the student court.

Kenvi Mahone, a member of the African American Organization said she hoped to recruit new members to increase awareness of African American culture.

New students used the fair, sponsored by Student Organizations and Leadership Development, to decide which organizations would suit their interests.

"It's nice that they do all this," freshman Lisa Redelfs said, "so you don't have to go out and search for yourself."

Representatives from the different clubs gave away promotional buttons, writing pens, and food along with information leaflets.

"One thing we want to accomplish is retention through involvement," Jon Shrader, chairman of College Republicans said. "It's a huge opportunity to go after freshmen because they're looking for something to do on campus. They're like the fresh meat of organizations."

While several groups target freshmen and transfer students, others would prefer to reach as many students as possible.

David Perry president of Campus Crusade for Christ said he wants "to let people know they have a relationship with God."

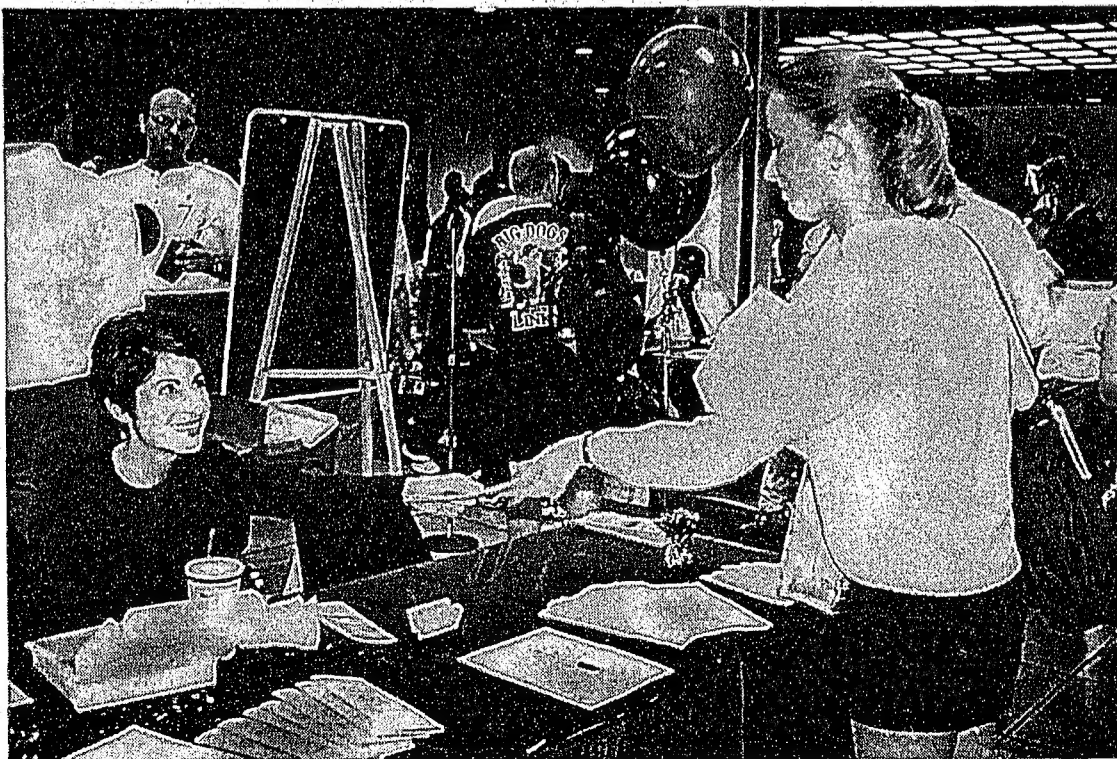

Terrell

Anderson used the fair to help him decide which fraternity he wanted to join. "I've been here for two years and I've been in intramural (sports)," he said, "but they might have something new. You never know."

Alpha Phi Alpha fraternity sent Creighton student Chune Johnson to the fair. He said he wanted to let others to see "how much love" students can have for their club or organization, adding "No one should leave here saying I don't have anything to do."

Peterson said students interested in joining or starting a club, group or organization should contact him from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. on the first floor of the Student Center in the SOLD offices.

Students Register To Vote Via World Wide Web Page

Becoming A Voter Is Made Easy With Web Technology

CHICAGO (College Press Service) - Thanks to NetVote '98, students can register to vote without ever leaving home.

The Web site — sponsored by the American Association of Retired Persons (AARP), MCI and Rock the Vote — can be found at:

www.netvote98.mci.com. The site states that the cyber-registration is a joint effort "linking generations, young and old, through the powerful combination of civic participation and our latest technology."

Using the site to register is simple. Just follow the directions that apply to your state.

Two to three weeks after completing the online application, you will receive a card — already addressed to your state's Secretary of State — via snail-mail. Check it for accuracy, sign it, and drop it in the mail. There's no reason to even lick a stamp; the postage is paid for.

The process is a direct result of the National Voter Registration Act of 1993, commonly known as Motor Voter, which allows people to register at their department of motor vehicles or at various public assistance agencies. The Act also required the Federal Election Commission to create one uniform application that can be used to register voters in all 50 states.

Faculty And Staff Get A Rolling Start

by Eileen Kenney
Staff Writer

Bocce, maybe. But bowling? It just doesn't seem like the professional game to play. But, in fact, UNO has a faculty/staff bowling league that has been going strong for over 30 years.

"I know some of your more cultured types may think bowling is a blue-collar-only kind of thing, and college professionals should stay away," geography professor Chuck Gildersleeve said. "But it was started as a way for faculty, staff and administrators to meet once a week for fun-time, and it gives (them) a chance to network and see the faces of the voices they speak with on the phone every week."

"The league has a uniqueness to it," said Jim Veiga, manager of grounds and environmental services. It was founded by Bob Ackerman, former chairman of the teacher education department, now deceased. Through the years, members have ranged from custodians to chancellors, secretaries to professors. Del Weber, chancellor emeritus, is the current league president.

It is a "mixed league," and each team must contain at least one member of the opposite sex. "Once in a while, a lone female drops out and is replaced with a male, and you have a team of four men. But after gentle fussing, the situation is usually corrected," Gildersleeve said.

Cec Barton, production coordinator for UNO television, sees the league as a great way to meet other faculty and staff. "Sometimes we don't always get out and get to know what's happening on campus. The bowling is fun, and at the same time people mention projects they are working on."

For Deb Wilcox, accountant, it wouldn't feel right not to bowl. "My dad taught me to bowl when I was eight and I've been bowling ever since." She said the league is a good way to meet people she wouldn't otherwise come in contact with.

When asked about competitiveness, most agreed Gildersleeve, who termed it a wash. "Some are extremely competitive to win, but others compete only with themselves to better their game. Most are out for the fun," he said. Staff members attribute more killer instinct to the faculty.

The sense of fun is evident in some of the team names. Gildersleeve's team was originally formed by the head of purchasing and risk management, and was called, "Dollars N Cents." With the influx of "Arts and Sciences silliness," Gildersleeve said, the name evolved into "Dollars N Sense." Veiga's team is "Hot-N-Now," while Barton's team is "Keglo Kinesis," German for "pin action."

Carolyn Crawford, staff secretary in the Registrar's office, joined the league last year, bowling with "Uncalled 4." Unfortunately, this year two members have failed to call back, leaving them the "Uncalled 2." Crawford is now on hold, waiting for two more teammates.

At the end of the season, members celebrate with a banquet and trophies. High score is not awarded in the league. One trophy is awarded for "Most Interesting Bowling Style," and another carries the name of the league founder. The Bob Ackerman Award goes to "The Person You Would Most

Like to Bowl With."

"So many people say, 'Oh, I don't want to bowl. I'm no good,'" Gildersleeve said. "But in a handicap league, someone with a low average can be an advantage. It's a learning experience. Nobody really cares how good you are at bowling," he said. "It's how good you are at showing up."

Without naming names, or dogging departments, current members note there are areas not represented by teams. Interested parties should form a team or be a single. Contact Jim Veiga for more information.

Health Services Offers A Variety Of Care To Students

by Colleen Sergeant
Medical Writer

UNO Health Services has more to offer than meets the eye.

"From the outside we don't look like we're much, because our door is so small," said Jeff Kuhr, interim supervisor of UNO Health Services.

But behind the atrium, awaits a spacious office equipped with several patient rooms, nurses and a physician or nurse practitioner on staff, as well as a laboratory to meet the needs of students. All of this is hidden on the first floor of the Milo Bail Student Center to the left of the Information Desk.

"I would say we'd be lucky if even 10 to 15 percent of students are aware of the services we offer," Kuhr said. Any currently enrolled student who has paid the University Program and Facilities Fee (UPFF) is eligible.

Students can actually make an appointment or walk-in between classes to see a physician. Physicians hours are available, they vary each week and are posted next to the front door.

"We are similar to an urgent care center," Kuhr said. The doctors generally handle minor things, because certain pieces of equipment, laboratory tests, and an x-ray machine are not available. "But in those cases we know where to refer people."

Some of the treatments offered include:

- blood pressure checks
- wart and mole removal
- emergency care
- pap exams(routine)
- limited vision screening
- first aid

Health Services also offers immunizations. Starting this fall

I love
surprises.
but not when it comes to my bills.

"So I got one of these. The AirTouch Prepaid Cellular Card. No monthly bills, no credit approvals, no contracts. Just pay up front and go. Thirty bucks gives me up to 50 minutes of local calling time. It also tells me how many minutes I have left before each call. And with AirTouch, I get really great coverage. It'll even work for the cell phone I already have. Or a new one...like for my birthday. That would be a nice surprise."

AVAILABLE AT: RADIOSHACK • PHONES PLUS • PRIORITY ONE

If Selected, UNO Could Host 2000 Transplant Games

Omaha Convention and Visitors Bureau would assist with transportation and overall service needs.

As mentioned, UNO would be the center of attention by hosting the sporting events.

"There's no doubt we would be able to put on a show for them and meet their needs without any problems," Kult said.

In return the visitors would pump an estimated 2.5 million into the local economy.

Marsha Morien, director of transplant services for NHS, said the games serve two main purposes. First, they offer a chance to show how transplant patients can return to healthy, productive lives and compete even after transplantation. The games also heighten awareness of organ and tissue donation and the need for these donations.

"I think the purposes of the games absolutely mirror the goals we have as a transplant center," Morien said. "We know that our patients can return to active lives after transplants, which is what the games are all about."

The Games also provide transplant patients a chance to interact with people who have had similar experiences, Kult said.

Morien feels that Omaha is an ideal location for the 2000 games, because the community would give the event the support it deserves.

Morien said other advantages are the size of Omaha and the UNO campus, which would allow for a quick commute from the Creighton dormitories to UNO and would allow people to travel UNO's campus by foot, she said.

The timing couldn't be better, Morien said, as the event would closely follow the opening of the Lied Transplant

Center at UNMC.

Hosting an event of this caliber is nothing new for Omaha. The College World Series and the Nike events are examples of how this town turns out to support events and welcome people from all across the country, Morien said.

"I think it's the spirit of the Omaha community that has been so supportive of transplants," Morien said. She believes people will notice this spirit if they have the chance to come to Omaha.

New Scholarship To Keep Nebraskans in Nebraska

Omaha." Hille has been dean here at UNO for the last three years.

"The campaign to get applicants usually starts in the fall, and the deadline is early spring," Hille said. Once the student accepts the scholarship, the student must participate in a business organization on campus and have an internship their junior year. This scholarship can be renewed each year if the student's GPA is above a 3.0.

Right now, the business college has several other scholarships for the students but this is the first one for incoming freshman. Hille said, "This donation is the largest single sum amount that the business college has ever received."

Both Hille and Swanson agreed on this idea that, "The concept and need for internships has grown." Usually there are more internships than interns. Swanson also said, "Many internships end up having the intern be employed with that company after the internship is over."

So if you're a business major-see your counselor to check out a possible internship to help gain that experience to make your college experience even better.

UNO Health Services: Hidden But Helpful

any new student will be required to show proof of rubella and measles vaccinations. But the good news is you can get stuck at health services for $10 per shot and avoid the higher costs at other physician offices.

Free lab work includes:

- urinalysis
  - blood cell count (limited)
  - mononucleosis testing
  - strep throat testing
  - sexually transmitted disease screening
  - blood glucose testing
- Other lab work such as, urine or serum pregnancy testing, can be done for a small fee.

Poking and pricking is only part of the picture. Health Services is a good health information source as well.

They provide informational brochures, an Alcohol and Drug Education Program, classroom presentations, and they organize Health and Wellness Week and National Collegiate Alcohol Awareness Week.

"We can offer any over-the-counter drug for free," Kuhr said. Health insurance and prescription discounts are also administered through their office.

"We have done a major overhaul this summer to make these services even more appealing," Kuhr said. "We would love people to come in and check us out—they'll be surprised."

Now that Health Services is no longer hiding from you, don't hide from them.

(KRT) — Yes, it's back-to-school time, and what better moment to explore the educational opportunities available on the Internet.

Naturally, there are many courses offered online for which registration and fees are required. But in the spirit of computing and the Net, where, as the hackers used to say, "information wants to be free," we'll look for free courses.

The Net is naturally computer oriented, so it's no surprise that it's chock full of tutorials on computer- and Internet-related subjects, such as designing your own World Wide Web pages.

We'll leave discovering all those as an exercise for you students, providing one example for folks who are baffled by Photoshop, the standard for image manipulation programs. Just head over to the Introduction to Web Design with Adobe Photoshop page: <http://Stars.com/Authoring/Graphics/Tools/Photoshop/>

The site provides what is meant to be a three-day course on the basics of the program, the image-editing program widely used on personal computers, Macintosh and UNIX computers.

In fact, the home page for this site includes several courses to help people create Web pages: <http://Stars.com/>

Science also is well represented on the Net.

With recent outbreaks of disease, such as problems with E.coli or hepatitis, perhaps you'd like to brush up on your biology. So head over to the Microbiology 101/102 Home page.

There, Dr. Ronald E. Hurlbert of Washington State University has put a Fundamentals of Microbiology course online at: <http://www.wsu.edu:8080/hurlbert/pages/101hmpg.html>

The course, with photographs, graphics, sound and animation, starts with the types of cells and moves through such topics as genetics fundamentals, disease and different fields of microbiology. You can test yourself to see if you've really learned anything.

Hurlbert also has put together links for other biology-related courses on the Net.

If you want a broader look at biology, try the MIT Biology

Hypertextbook,

created to supplement the Introductory Biology course at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology: <http://esg-www.mit.edu:8001/esgbio/>

7001main.html

The chapters start with a chemistry review and cover a range of basic biology topics.

Mavs Close Pre-Season Practice, Ready For Season Opener

by Brandon Witt
Staff Writer

The Mav football team had their final tune-up for Thursday night's season opener against Central Missouri State with the final scrimmage of the fall. The score was 52-6.

It was the final pre-season scrimmage on Wednesday night at Berquist Stadium in Omaha and the Mavericks geared up for the fall games. There were some outstanding players during the scrimmage, but all in all it was inconsistent.

The first to score during the scrimmage was tailback Adam Wright, who punched it in from five yards out and place-kicker Paul Kosel added the extra point. Then senior quarterback Ed Thompson ran 27 yards to the end zone and Kosel tacked on a second extra point. Thompson then completed a 24-yard scoring strike to tight end Pete Coniglio to put the score at 21-0.

James Johnson, a freshman tailback, ran for a total of 91 yards and two touchdowns and helped to lead the team to 35-0. Tailback Jess Holland scored on a 2-yard run and Kosel tacked on a 42-yard field goal.

Thompson then completed a 3-yard touchdown pass to junior tight end Brian Benjamin. The offense racked up 671 net yards in 100 plays.

Linebacker Terrell Spears, No. 25, led the defense with 10 tackles and Nate Sullivan intercepted quarterback Seth Turman's pass in the end zone and returned over 100 yards for a touchdown that brought the final score to 52-6.

Defensive Coordinator Marvin Sanders said, "We really didn't know what to expect going into the scrimmage. We were a little inconsistent and that's not too good."

Sanders, in his second year as the Mavs' defensive coordinator, added "these two a-days are tough. I think that the players are tired of beating on each other."

Well, they won't have to wait

"We really didn't know what to expect going into the scrimmage. We were a little inconsistent and that's not too good." Marvin Sanders, Defensive Coordinator too long to find new opponents. On Thursday at 7 p.m., the Mavs play their first game of the year against Central Missouri State University. The game will be played in Warrensburg, Missouri at Walton Stadium and can be seen on Cox 02TV.

"Central Missouri is a good team to play for the first game of the year," noted Sanders. "It'll be tough."

Central Missouri State's Head Coach is Willie Fritz, who is in his second year and it's colors are cardinal and black. Fritz coached Blynn (Texas) College to a national championship in the junior college circuit. They are coming off of a 5-6 record in 1997. The Mules lost 13 starters but have 11 returning. They also have 25 of 47 letter winners.

UNO has 19 returning letter winners. The last time that UNO played CMSU the Mavs won 41-12 to open the 1997 season. UNO also leads the all-time series 2-1.

The Maverick coaches and players look at the Central Missouri game as the 'first step' in a season that they plan to play one game at a time and not look too far ahead. Perhaps, if the team truly is tired of beating on each other, they will welcome the chance to hone their skills on a new team.

ABC's Jackson To Say Goodbye After Fiesta Bowl

By Barry Jackson
Knight-Ridder Newspapers

MIAMI - For 27 autumns, he has entertained us with his homespun humor, amused us with his often-imitated Whoa Nellie!

When you flip on ABC and hear Keith Jackson calling a game this season, take a moment to appreciate the work of a legend. It may be your last chance.

Jackson, who has announced college football for 46 of the past 47 years, will retire after the Jan. 4 Fiesta Bowl, which likely will determine the national championship.

"It just seems like the right time," Jackson said recently from his summer home in British Columbia. "I'll be 70 in October. It's the next generation's turn."

Other sportscasters have won more awards. Others have received more prime-time exposure. But no current network play-by-play announcer is associated more strongly with a particular sport than Jackson is with college football.

Jackson has been the sport's signature voice for nearly three decades.

And he hasn't liked everything he has seen.

"The indecisiveness of the leadership of the collegiate community has been the worst part," Jackson said. "They could have served their playoff idea in a better way. Even with the new system, what are you going to do when there are three undefeated teams? The best way to do it would be picking four teams after the bowl games. But the college presidents have kept that from happening."

"The other thing that bothers me is that student-athletes should be paid. Anyone who generates revenue should share in the pot."

Still, Jackson won't leave the game bitter.

"I'm going to miss being at the stadium," he says. "I'll miss the ambience, the gathering, the band, the special feeling. People come back to campus to watch the games, and that maintains a link between generations. That's why I prefer college football to the NFL. But I won't miss the

Iowa State Professor Invents AIDS Treatment

By Ellyn Peterson
Iowa State University
Iowa State Daily

An Iowa State professor's discovery of a treatment to help AIDS patients gain muscle mass was unveiled recently to 12,000 scientists and activists at the World AIDS Conference in Geneva.

Steven Nissen, professor of animal science and founder of MTI BioTech Inc., located in Iowa State University's Research Park, invented Juven, a dietary supplement designed to slow muscle deterioration.

Muscle loss occurs when disease or trauma places additional nutritional demands on the body. These stresses can diminish appetite, causing the body to use protein stored within muscles. Over time, muscles become smaller, weaker and less flexible.

"In a few months, an AIDS victim can go from looking normal to wasting away," Nissen said. "We breathe through muscles, and if you can't cough you get pneumonia."

The results of the two-year study involving the nonprescription amino acid formula show dramatic results for AIDS patients that could have a far-reaching impact over the next few years.

The clinical study involved AIDS patients who had lost at least 5 percent of their body weight during the preceding two months and compared patients taking Juven to those taking a placebo in a double-blind test.

During the eight-week study, patients taking Juven gained an average of 6 1/2 pounds, 5 1/2 pounds of it muscle, while the placebo group continued to lose an average of 1 1/2 pounds of muscle over the eight-week period.

"We designed the product to protect these patients from further loss, so we assumed that as our body of data grew, the results would level out. Instead they just got stronger," Nissen said.

Nissen said they performed the study on AIDS patients because the changes are larger in AIDS patients.

"There are a hundred cancers and only one AIDS," he said. "[AIDS] is more homogeneous than the specific types of cancer.

"Over the next two years we plan to take this further to cancer victims and others suffering from terminal diseases," Nissen said.

The key ingredient in Juven is HMB (beta-hydroxy-beta-methylbutyrate), which Nissen discovered after years of research at ISU. HMB quickly became one of the best selling sports supplements on the market because it helps prevent muscle breakdown, Nissen said.

"We knew that all three ingredients in Juven, HMB, L-glutamine and L-arginine, were safe and independently supply key building blocks for the muscle cell," Nissen said.

Nissen and nine other employees of MTI BioTech came up with the name Juven after playing around with variations of the word "rejuvenate."

"It pretty much tastes like Tang," Nissen said. "We spent a lot of time designing it so people would like it. A study showed that 70 percent of the people prefer orange, so we started with that."

MTI Biotech is planning to release several different flavors, but regardless of taste, Juven produces results, Nissen said.

"This stuff works as good, if not better, than the drugs prescribed today," he said.

Perhaps more amazing than the results is the cost that separates Juven from other muscle-loss therapies, Nissen said.

Jackson Announces Retirement from ABC Sports

traveling or the airline food or the limo drivers who don't show up."

Jackson shakes his head when he hears announcers like Roy Firestone impersonate his Southern accent. "I don't know what that serves," Jackson says. "And the expression, Whoa Nellie! is not really mine. I don't even remember the first time I used it. It actually came from an old fellow in Los Angeles named Dick Lane, who used it all the time back in the 1950s when he was doing roller derby for several television stations."

Jackson doesn't want to be remembered for any particular expression. But he takes immense pride in his ability to express himself with analogies and historical references - a talent rare among contemporary sportscasters.

Jackson began his career as a news anchor in Seattle, where he honed his writing skills. He joined ABC as a news correspondent in 1964, became the play-by-play announcer for the first year of Monday Night Football (1970), then moved permanently to ABC's college-football package in 1971 while juggling NBA games and other assignments.

"If you are going to have success in the business, you have to never be afraid to turn a phrase," Jackson says. "If you can say something that people will understand and enjoy, then do it. Don't say it just to be cute. And don't confuse your listener.

Sometimes, clarity comes easily if you use different phrases. That's the only mechanical thing I've done to be a little different."

Jackson has worked with more than a dozen broadcast partners on various sports - Howard Cosell during his one season on Monday Night Football, Dick Vitale on college basketball, and Bill Russell and Jerry West on the NBA. Jackson has been paired with Bob Griese the past 11 years on college football.

"It has been a fun 11 years," Griese said. "Keith is so talented, yet he's so down to earth. There are a lot of memories. One time in a Florida-Florida State game, both teams came out firing. Keith says,

'Whoa Nellie! The barn's on fire, and they're taking a couple of rows of the cornfield!' I have to listen closely because if he comes up with something the listener doesn't understand, I have to say, 'Back up.'"

Jackson will retire in Vancouver and Los Angeles.

"I fish when I'm in British Columbia when there are fish to be fished," Jackson says, just the way you would expect him to say it. "My wife is a gardener. The days go by swiftly."

How does he want to be remembered?

"I want people to think I was a pro," he said. "One bit of advice I got at a young age was, 'Never let your mouth overload your rump.' I've tried to follow that."

This site is a distance learning project developed in 1997 out of a classroom course in the University of Chicago Graham School of General Studies, but the site is independent of the school.

The course is divided into eight sessions, with readings assigned for each of Woolf's books. The sessions incorporate commentary from the site's instructor, as well as messages from visitors to the site.

Unfortunately, the notes for sessions one and two are online, but the rest are "under construction."

A more formal site, with courses you sign up for and that are taught by volunteer teachers, is English for Internet: <http://www.study.come/index.html>

EFI is a project overseen by David Winet, who teaches at the University of California at Berkeley Extension English Language Program. Classes are free, but $25 donations will be accepted.
